He began the day by a victors exhibition of temper, which almost cost him his liberty. His counsel asked the Court to have the prisoner kept quiet and prevented from smugning out statements. This request made Guiteau frantic with rage. He leaped to his feet and went through the familiar tirade, insisting that he was leading counsel, and, as such, competent to act on his individual responsibility. He said his counsel were incompetent, and were trilling with him. "Hush," Keep still." Sit down." Be quiet, "whisper brother, sister, counsel, and bailiffs.

"Oh, mind your business." is the angry answer. "Let me alone: I'm leading counsel, and will talk just as much as I want to, Scoville is doing as well as he can, but he's no lawyer and no politician."

This brought down the house, Judge, jury, coursel, and spectators iolining in a shout of laughter. Guiteau's gluttony is notorious. mythical Robin the Bobbin the Big-bellied Ben. than of an ordinary mortal.

THE TESTIMENT.

The first witness was Joseph K. Sharpe. He did hot see the shooting, but saw the prisoner altempting to escape and witnessed the arrest. Eta M. Rugier, a young woman who happened to be at the B street entrance to the depot, testified to hearing the conversation between Guitouu and the hackman, while the former was arranging to be driven to the cemetery. She also witnessed the shooting, and gave her evidence in a clear and straightforward manner. She was closely cross-questioned by Mr. Scoville, but adhered strictly in every particular to her evidence in a chear and straightforward manner. She was closely cross-questioned as to Guiteau's manner when taking to the hackman, she said he was pale and appeared to be troutled. She thought he must be going out to see the graves of some dead friends. The witness described minutely the shooting and the relative positions of the parties at the time sain shot was fired. She was positive that the first shot took effect, as the President threw up his hands and commenced to ship down before the second shot was fired. At the second shot Guitoau stepped two orthree steps nearer and held his arm higher. The witness proved to be the best yet examined upon the haddens of the shooting.

By this time opposition has made him furious. It has been noticeable all through his confinement and trial that anything like personal violence throws him almost into convulsions. That common builiffs should dary treat him with this liberty excites his resontment and rage beyond all reason. As the testimony today showed, this characteristic came out stonicly even at the very time of the shooting, when he compasined of the "excited" familiarity of these who put him under arrest. Judge Cox is perplexed. Such contumney in a prisoner is scandalous, and the whole court room is laughing and scowling at once. The Judge lees his temper, however, and repeats his warning that the prisoner must keep quiet or be removed. The admonition only inflames Guiteau to more outrageous behavior. Ho defies the Court, shouting out while he bangs the table for emphasis.

I want your Honor to understand, shouts the prisoner again, that I am going to taik all Iwant to, or I appeal to the court in bane. I represent myself— keep your hands off, you confounded fool. You haven't got no sense!

The three policemen stars at him as if puralized by such audacity. A deputy marshal dashes toward him on the run, and hisses in his ear that he positively must stop. The burly form of Marsnat Henry is seen pushing toward the prisoner, his black eyes flashing with scorn and indignation. Guiteau understands it is time to pause, and now gives the Judge a chance of speak. The Judge then says:

"On several occasions in courts of the United States prisoners have been removed on account of their misconduct in court, but allowed access to their counsel during the progrees of their trial. Indeed, it has been done in this very court, in the case of Lawrence."

"All right," says Guiteau, settling back; "now let the case of Lawrence."

Mr. J. Stanley Brown, private secretary to the late President, was the next winess. He testified to Guiteau's frequent calls at the White House. He (witness) finally, about the 15th of May, told the ushers that Guiteau must no longer trouble the office. He had told Guiteau himself, and had reiterated it twice, that his application, being in the consular service, must go to the State Department. The witness identified a large number of letters from Guiteau to the President, which the District Attorney read, guitflau's LETTERS TO GARFIELD. GUITEAU'S LETTERS TO GASFIELD.

Gallagher got in some good work in the thirty-swenth and rolled up 19. Diom followed with 5 coming up within two points of Gallagher's 109. Neither man played with half his accustomed vigor. Diom said he test weak, Gallagher relieved the monotony of the game in the forty-third inning by an elegant run of 29, several magnificent long shots marking the performance. He dropped his one, however, on one of the easiest shots. The veteran was now 35 points behind his more agile openent. Dion did some nicely executed work on long angles in the forty-oighth inning, making 15.

Dion made another strong rady in the filty-fourth inning, gathering 22 by skirmishing around the table. Coming again with 8, he was only 7 points away from Gallagher's 175.

Gallagher kept his forces well in hand, making the game exciting toward the close. At the fity-eighth inning the score was 183 to 181 in favor of Gallagher. In the next Gallagher played carroms until they yielded 17, running the game out. Following is the score:
